

The Regent Berlin: “One of the world’s best places to stay”

American Magazine “Condé Nast Traveller” includes the five-star-plus-hotel in its “Gold list”

Berlin, March 10th 2005 – The Regent Berlin, located at the historic Gendarmenmarkt in the heart of the German capital, has earned one of the most coveted distinctions in the travel industry: a place on the 2005 Gold List of Condé Nast Traveler, an annual guide to the Top 700 hotels, resorts, and cruise lines in the world. The readers of the US-travel magazine who are following the publishers “mostly affluent, sophisticated, and frequent travelers” have collectively judged the five-star-hotel to be among the best places to stay in the world.

According to the readers of Condé Nast Traveler, highlighted at The Regent Berlin is the exquisite guest service. One of the comments published on the Website was: “The staff treated us as though nothing was a problem”. Therefore the Regent Berlin received 97.5 of 100 possible points for its service – and made in this category number three amongst the European hotels. Additionally the readers appreciated the “lovely luxurious Biedermeier Rooms” which overlook the Gendarmenmarkt with its two historic cathedrals and the concert hall or – on the quiet back-side of the building- a typical Berlin courtyard.

For Wolfgang Nitschke, General Manager at The Regent Berlin, it is an honor to be included in the famous “Gold list”: “Being based on the evaluation of over 20.000 reader responses, this distinction is the proof of our success.” The property recently also received an award from another US-Magazine: In January the hotel was being awarded as the number one-hotel in Germany by “Travel + Leisure” in their annual T+L 500 guide to the best hotels in the world.
